

2011 Adult Workshop & Lecture Series Carlsbad Senior Center

Title of Lecture #5:

Important but Difficult Questions: A Conversation about Caregiving and End-of-Life Considerations

The “gift” of longevity has made it possible for millions of Americans to enter old age. Important questions about the quality and quantity of life are now more commonly being considered. The inquiry on how, what, when and where to open a dialogue with your family members and loved ones on end-of-life considerations are more relevant than ever.

This lecture and subsequent discussions will explore the changing views of death in America and finding ways to speak openly about the inevitable. There will be a focus on learning communication techniques, developing assessment tools, and using easy-to-follow rules of engagement that will move everyone to an open dialogue. Please join us for a 90-minute conversation about the end-of-life considerations.
